The volume under review contains another excellence. All its pages are applied with valuable arrayinal indices, so that a glance at the margin is sufficient to apprise the reader of the contents of the page.

Another matter of great importance to the lawyer in this volume is a good collection of the subjects of all legislation since 1851. Heretofore, the lawyer in examining our legislation on any given subject had first to find what was relevant to it in the flevision of 1852, and then to turn over the pages of the volumes of substances Statutes to The volume under review contains another excelle Mesar, Gavin and Rond have reflered us of all this trouble and double. They have collected together in consecutive pages of all the statutes made since 1851, on the same subject.

Thus, on pages 573 to 577 of their first volume they have collected all our legislation, new in force, on the subject of husband and wife, including the act of 1852 and three acts of 1857. And there have followed the same mode of co-Iscation, in appropriate consecutive pages, in regard to all other topics of legislation.

A still more valuable feature are the copious and accurate notes contained in the volume in question. This ver-upe includes the Constitution of the United States, the Constitution of Indians, and several important acts of Virginia and statutes of Congress, and a large portion of our own statutes now in force. The numerous decisions of the CARY'S COUGH CURE;
